

WALLACE R. FARRINGTON, - EDITOR.
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1895.

Silk culture promises to be an industry of more or less importance in Oregon. A Japanese has been experimenting in that State for some years, and his exhibits for this season are commented on very favorably by experts. There are many people in this country who might profit by the progressive spirit displayed in the Western States.

The quinine bill of the Spanish government for its troops in Cuba has already reached $50,000, and there are calls for more. This is expensive re-enforcement, especially as quinine can't put the fighting force into any company of soldiers, compared with the tonic of patriotism that inspires the hearts of the Cubans. Spain will find that no amount of dosing will cure the malady it has engendered by years of misrule and oppression.

DR. ARTHUR J. BROWN, one of the secretaries of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, recently made the following extraordinary statement concerning missionary work in Japan: "It is now a serious question whether it is worth while to send more missionaries to Japan. Ten years ago Japan stretched out welcoming arms to the West. There was the mighty chance to Christianize all Japan had men and money been poured in. It was lost, and today the question is trembling in the balance whether or not we shall withdraw our missionaries from that country, where no progress is being made seemingly." If Dr. Brown continues in his present frame of mind, we may expect to hear that he has declared for turning the whole world over to sin and the devil. If all the church workers should sit quietly by and wait over the mistakes of the past, there would be mighty little progress in the world. Mistakes have occurred, mistakes will occur, and it is by profiting by the missteps that success in the future is assured.

ANOTHER ATTACK ON MONOPOLY.

The latest advance step in the war against trusts in the United States has been taken by the Attorney General of New York, who has cited the American Tobacco Company, a New Jersey corporation doing business in New York under the law of comity, to appear before a judge of the Supreme Court and show cause why the certificate permitting it to do business in New York should not be revoked. The charge against the American Tobacco Company is that its methods of business are contrary to the laws of the State; "by reason of consolidation, combination and conspiracy" the company "has been able to control the market price of the various kinds of paper cigarettes manufactured and offered for sale." The question for the court to decide is whether a company incorporated in one State can do business in another State whose laws prohibit the formation of such companies at home. Should the tobacco trust be ruled out of New York, the sugar trust and other combinations will suffer the same fate.

The feeling against the trusts in the United States has been steadily increasing, those who have opposed them as a matter of principle having been joined by a large number of people who have been caught financially in the corners of the combinations. As is remarked by the Louisville Journal, "It is a shallow trick to incorporate a monopoly in one State when it is intended that it shall do business in another. From whatever source the reform may have proceeded it will be welcome. A decision against the trust in New York need not drive it out of existence as long as other States may have more lenient laws or more complaisant officials, but the moral effect would be very great. It would almost certainly stop the speculation in its shares, and this evil, owing to the active participation in it of its chief officers, has come to be almost as objectionable as its business methods."

New York will at least do well in chasing the trusts from its borders as, once the work is well under way, it will only be a matter of time when monopolies, large and small, will be pursued from State to State, and finally suffer the ignominious death of the lottery. The people have been calling on their political representatives to put down the monopolies and have been met with unfulfilled promises. Should final success meet one effort the politicians will be forced to take up a more active campaign than has characterized their efforts in the past.

THE current number of the Handicraft says: "Gang labor is, in its last analysis, slave labor. A luna is an economic waste; though white labor is done by slaves (under contract or otherwise), lunaship is necessary. Education, planning an escape from slavish conditions, aspires to make the future laborer independent of superintendence. In working on this principle with boys it is to be expected that at first there will be a dropping off in the aggregate amount of labor done. If, however, there is enough insistence upon the thorough completion of the work given to the boy, he will soon learn that to get satisfactory results he must work steadily. It is results we are all after, and results tell the story even as to ways and means—though perhaps not in terms of number of strokes or minutes. Getting good results from boys' labor—because they themselves are interested in seeking results—is all a question of wise supervision."

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.

Croup is a terror to young mothers, and to them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by all dealers. ### THE AERMOTOR

Steel Tower.

As pumping is one of the most common uses to which wind motors are put, the method of communicating motion to the pump is very important and has received our closest attention, and the defect created in most wind mills of racking themselves to pieces in a severe wind has been obviated in the Aermotor by means of back gearing, so that the wheel makes about three turns to one stroke of the pump or enough so that the wheel may run at its natural speed, unrestrained in any moderate wind, without doing violence to the pump or its connections. This enables us to give the pump a long stroke instead of the quick, jerky, short strokes of ordinary wind mills. This means that the valves are not worked so harshly in opening and closing and that the wear and tear is greatly diminished, while the piston rod speed is increased, and consequently the pumping capacity is increased. The back gearing, together with the extra holes for crank pins in the crank wheel also makes it possible to use with the Aermotor any ordinary size of pump cylinder. If a wind motor is not sensitive to the direction of the wind much of its efficiency is lost.

The ease with which a wind mill faces up to the wind depends on weight of the mill, the kind and condition of the bearings on which it pivots and the comparative leverage of wheel and tail. In the matter of leverage, the advantage enjoyed by the Aermotor over common wind mills will be made apparent by the fact that the center of the wheel is only twelve inches from the mast or center on which it turns while that of the best known wheel is thirty inches, requiring as is easily seen two and one-half times as long or large a tail to balance the same sized wheel. The Aermotor presents one-half the surface to the wind; it is apparent that this other wheel must have five times the tail surface to make it face the wind equally well thereby greatly increasing the liability to wreck in a storm. The mere fact that we have placed 150 more Aermotors on the islands is sufficient guarantee of their superiority and desirability by those who want a motor that looks after itself.
